Great Beginner Tips On How to DJ Mix: Improving Your Skills

As a beginner in the world of DJing, you may be on the prowl for some insights and principles on how to improve your skills as a DJ. You will also want to know how to mix music properly.

First of all, you need to remember that as a DJ, your job is to maintain a steady and smooth flow of energy and rhythm on the dance floor. You have to keep your audience excited about dancing and keep them that way during the duration of the party. You also need to please the crowd.

So, here are some of the easiest principles of DJ mixing, which will allow you to entertain the crowd and keep them on the dance floor.

First of all, you need to remember that beat mixing is one of the most difficult things to do when you are learning how to DJ mix. However, thanks to long intros and long outros, beat mixing has become a lot easier to do. This means that as a beginner, you will have a better chance of learning how to DJ mix a lot faster than before.

It's really not that difficult to find the perfect mix out of a dance track. This is because the breakdown in the record is obvious. The technique here is that you should know how to count. By counting, you will have a clearer picture on where you should place your mix.

You have to listen carefully to the song being played on the dance floor and by counting you will be able to prepare to cue the song that you intend on playing next. By using your headphones, you can mix the beat of the next tune with the music that you are currently playing.

Your goal here is to begin the second song on its first beat when the current song that is playing through the speakers is heading towards the outro section.

Beat mixing is a precise skill that you need to master as a DJ. You have to know where you are going to beat match the songs you are playing and your hand will also need to stay on the pitch of the tune that you are going to introduce to the crowd. You also need to match the drum beats of each song at the same time.

Along with that, you will want to speed up or slow down the tune you are working on to introduce. You can do this by adjusting the pitch on the mixer.

DJ mixing is a skill that you have to regularly practice on as a DJ. By mastering the art of beat mixing, you will be able to do a smooth transition from one track to another and really keep the music flowing and keep the crowd happy.

Remember these tips and you will be able to keep the party going all night and you will also be able to avoid every DJ's nightmare, which is an empty dance floor.
